The year 2012 marks the 100th anniversary of Oregon granting women the right to vote, so we have decided to dedicate this year’s newsletters to some of the noted women throughout Silverton’s history. This month we are featuring the inimitable Mildred Thayer.

Mildred ‘Millie’ Wilson Thayer
Dec. 25, 1927 - Aug. 31, 2000
Teacher, Historian, Author, Volunteer

What is it that makes a historian? What is that drive to fill all the blanks, make all the connections, get it all written down? Like her predecessor before her, June Drake, Millie Thayer had what it takes to be called a historian-extraordinaire. In her short, 73 years, she produced some of the most useful documentation of Silverton’s history. It’s hard to imagine how she was able to accomplish so much, producing four books, plus one that remains unfinished, all the while caring for family, volunteering and teaching. It was a true labor of love; a love of history and a love of Silverton.

When I joined the historical society twelve years ago, there were certain names that kept popping up in the course of museum business which of course, is history. There were few more revered than Millie Thayer. I had noticed the books she had written and have referred to them countless times. Until I volunteered to write about her, there had not been an occasion to look at her own personal story, written in “The Oregon Years.”

Having been born in a sod house in Nebraska, Millie arrived in Silverton in 1938 with her parents, Bill and Eva Wilson and two siblings, Elaine and Duane (she didn’t learn that Bill was actually her stepfather until she was 20 years old). They had moved from the Midwest, probably to escape the harsh living conditions and lack of opportunities. The Wilsons took a job on the Luigi DeSantis place in the Silverton Hills because it offered housing…a one room berry cabin with a mattress on the floor. Being innovative and industrious, gathering cast-offs from previous berry pickers, they soon had two beds and a homey cabin. Mr. DeSantis appreciated the Wilson’s hard work and they were hired to stay on after the berry season was over. They lived there for 9 months.

They eventually moved out to the Abiqua area, buying a place from Edgar Hobart. Millie went to Dunagan School and then Silverton High School. In 1945, Millie went to Oregon Normal School, now called WOSC in Monmouth. There was a shortage of teachers in 1947 so after two years of college she was asked to get an emergency license and start teaching at Evens/Evans Valley School where she had to teach her own brother and sister. (Dunagan had consolidated with Evans Valley).

After two years she returned to college and got her degree in teaching. She taught two years at Cascade Locks, eventually moving to Alaska where she met her future husband, Ed Thayer. Their only child was born in 1955, not long after they moved back to Silverton.

Millie was teaching at Mark Twain when she started her students on a history project of talking and recording a number of businessmen around town. One of the best oral histories done by Herman Goschie was at the behest of one of her students about the hop industry. Some of them were short, some of them had flaws; but they, at least, are something that we wouldn’t have if she hadn’t inspired her students with the importance of collecting history from people who had lived it.

She ‘retired’ in 1988, but like many people, she stayed so busy she wondered how she had had time to work. In the short 12 years from her retirement to her death, her life was a constant round of volunteering and teaching, compiling and writing. She taught 55 Alive classes, belonged to Oregon BPW and the Retired Teachers Association as well as serving as secretary for the Willamette Historical Auto Club.
Homer Davenport Community Festival
August 5, 6,7, 2011

Homer Davenport became the focus of Silverton, Oregon's traditional Summer Festival in 1980. Every year since, the celebrations have kept Silverton's young and old alike in high spirits. This year as usual, the 2011 Homer Davenport Community Festival will be held on August 5, 6 and 7, the first full weekend in August. Come join us as we celebrate the life and work of Homer C. Davenport, Silverton's favorite son and 19th century Hearst Political Cartoonist. For more information, visit the Homer Page at: http://HomerDavenport.com/

Timothy Woodbridge Davenport
July 30, 1826 - April 26, 1911
By Gus Frederick

On April 26, 1911, Silverton and the State of Oregon lost one of its more learned, compassionate and literary figures from pioneer times. Timothy Woodbridge Davenport, father of Homer, was a remarkable person in his own right. He was a medical doctor, a farmer, surveyor, Indian agent, store owner, State legislator and more. In his later years, he took to writing. Over a period of several years, he contributed over a half dozen papers to the then-new Oregon Historical Society, on topics ranging from historical recollections to his own take on various aspects of society. Looking behind the shining star that was his offspring Homer, we start to see the picture of a complex, caring and influential Oregonian. As this is the Centennial of the passing of Timothy Woodbridge Davenport, we dedicate this year’s Homer Davenport Community Festival to his memory.

Dime Toss Booth at Strawberry Festival!!
Sunday—June 19th

We are still collecting glassware for use in our Dime Toss booth. Please scour your home and local yard and garage sales to help us out. Then be sure to come find us at the Strawberry Festival on June 19 to share in the fun and help us raise a little much needed funds! You can drop off your donations at the museum on most Tuesday mornings or on Saturdays and Sundays when we're open. You can also drop off items at my home, 211 Welch St., Silverton, down the hill from the hospital. (Leave it on our porch if no one answers your knock.)

Thank you all in advance for your generosity and support—

Kathy Hunter

April Member Program

A large group of SCHS members and guests enjoyed a delightful visit with Carolyn Kaufman Simmons who worked in the office at Silver Falls Timber Co. almost directly out of high school until the mill closed in 1945. Carolyn was able to put a personal touch on the large mill, recalling stories about working relationships behind the scenes. After her talk we gathered to look at our large collection of photographs of Silver Falls Timber Company and the logging industry. Everyone agreed, it was a wonderful evening.

It was probably around this time that she started workshops, teaching people to write their personal memories.

Two of her books were compiled and written in 1995: “The Oregon Years” and “Silverton Country History.” Following in 1996 was her book, “Trees: An Important Oregon Resource;” and “Living in the Silverton Oregon Country” was put together in 1997. After Millie’s death, her daughter, Victoria, brought a box full of Millie’s research material including stories for a new book which was going to be titled “Silverton: Gateway to the Falls”.

Thankful just barely touches the surface to describe our gratitude for all her work when searching for specific tidbits of Silverton’s history. Whether writing about the logging industry or gathering people’s memories, the Historical Society has benefited: we have her books, the slides she ordered from the Oregon Historical Society in Portland, and the tapes from her classes. Her books are for sale at the museum except for “Gateway….”. It’s in our archives, waiting for the next dedicated historian who might be willing to do a final proof-read.

Three Silverton Homes Added to National Register of Historic Places

As the result of a submission by the City of Silverton to the Oregon State Advisory Committee on Historic Preservation and their subsequent recommendation for acceptance, three local properties are Oregon’s most recent additions to the National Register of Historic Places. The homes include the Murton and Lillian DeGuire Home located on Hill Street; June Drake’s home on South Water and the Louis J. Adams house on West Main. The homes were selected following a survey of over 400 Silverton sites in order to identify three homes representing different architectural styles and socio-economic backgrounds. For more information, go to www.oregonheritage.org and click on “National Register” at the left of the page. Congratulations to homeowners Jamie and Valerie Martinson, Ed and Karen McKenzie and Ron and Jane Jones!

Silverton Iris Expert Featured

The Bulletin of the American Iris Society

Dr. Kleinsorge—Oregon Pioneer in Irises

Tracy Plotner, AIS Librarian

The January 2011 edition of the Bulletin of the American Iris Society included a story on Silverton’s own Dr. Rudolph Kleinsorge. Not only was Dr. Kleinsorge a respected physician and surgeon and civic activist, he also found time to pursue an avid interest in the raising and development of irises.

In 1916, he began landscaping his new home with irises. By 1926 he had established an iris farm on his 100 square foot garden plot and began distributing a catalog. Over the years he received many awards from Iris organizations in recognition of the blooms he developed on his own, including the American Iris Society and the British Iris Society. He was also recognized with his own day of appreciation here in Silverton in May of 1969 for his lifelong involvement in the city.

Dr. Kleinsorge died in 1978 at the age of 95, but his home still stands on East Main Street and his contributions to medicine, the town of Silverton and the world of irises live on.

We have a copy of the January issue of The Bulletin of the American Iris Society at the Museum along with many other items from the life of Dr. Kleinsorge.

Volunteers still needed!!

It would be a terrible thing if we had to post a notice on the Museum door saying:

“CLOSED DUE TO LACK OF VOLUNTEERS”

Please help us keep that from happening—just three hours of your time once a month is all we need. We still have 3 slots open—two on the third Saturday and one on the fourth Sunday of the month. And we can always use volunteers who would be willing to help on an “as needed basis”. No experience required, just a willingness to meet people curious about Silverton’s past. You might even have quiet time for exploring the museum on your own or reading a good book. Think it over and call Chris at 503-873-4529. Thank you!!

Thank you to Robin Anderson for overseeing our display at the recent Genealogy Conference presented by Ancestry Detectives. And also thanks to Carolyn Hutton, Tom Worthen and Kathy Hunter for hosting our display throughout the day. The event was a great success.

New Look at the Museum!

Thanks to Board member and artist, Kay LaLone, the front windows of the Museum have been given a face lift! No longer are there blank white spaces staring out….Kay has painted a scene that looks like beautiful drapes framing the window as you look inside. The photo does not do her artwork justice—come by and look for yourself. And keep checking the Museum for new signage and other improvements to the exterior.

Two of your SCHS Board members have been appointed to the Silverton Historic Landmarks Commission. Norman English and Chris Schwab were approved at the March City Council meeting and can expect to begin their new duties in July of this year. The five-member Commission was established in 2006 to help preserve the City’s historic heritage. More information can be found at www.silverton.or.us.

On Saturday, May 14, I attended the Preservation Month Fair at the State Capitol in Salem. Several organizations were there offering helpful information on preserving historic items from clothing to photos to buildings. Tours were offered of the Capitol building including a climb up the 121 steps to the golden Oregon Pioneer.

The booth hosted by the Oregon State Archives was selling copies of the 2011 Oregon Blue Book along with a commemorative edition of the 1911 Blue Book in celebration of 100 years of the Oregon Blue Book. I’ll have a copy for your perusal here at the Museum. You can order your own at —
